Walking with Good Friends

"For more than a decade now, whenever I've felt lost, Radio Liangyou has always provided guidance. I didn't leave my two children at home for work, because the programs taught me to set priorities. Along the way, although there have been many challenges, I have moved forward step by step relying on the Lord Jesus—God's guidance never fails. I am grateful to have Liangyou by my side; whenever I face uncertainty, I reach out to the radio station and always receive the right guidance. I thank God for using Liangyou to bless me. Although my husband and I don't earn much working locally, God has not let us lack anything—in fact, we even have a surplus. I am truly very grateful to God."

(Sister Liu)

✠ May God guide Sister Liu through Radio Liangyou, granting her clear direction amid confusion and at life's turning points; may He grant her and her husband sufficient wisdom to steadfastly prioritize what matters most and joyfully press on in the Lord.

Dyed Lettuce

Recently, a scandal involving "dyed lettuce" came to light in Gansu. According to a joint announcement issued by the local Bureau of Agriculture and Rural Affairs and the Market Regulation Bureau, authorities inspected 53 vegetable procurement and storage companies in the area and found that six of them had illegally used the food additive "Green Fruit" to dye lettuce during the procurement process. Law enforcement officers immediately seized and destroyed the tainted lettuce and initiated investigations into the involved companies. Applying colorants to vegetables can easily mask the product's inherent defects, leading consumers to misjudge its freshness and quality.

("CNR-1 The Voice of China", September 8, 2026)

✠ May the authorities strengthen inspections of fresh vegetables and crack down on companies' use of illegal additives. May the Lord transform these companies so they can maintain vegetable freshness through improved transportation.

Growth Through Trials

"From a young age, my mother took me to all kinds of gatherings, and I grew up immersed in the church environment. When I was 16, I began studying theology, and God led me step by step into ministry. God has given me so many gifts so that I may better serve the church. To keep me from becoming proud, God gave me a thorn—a polyp in my throat that made speaking very difficult. That was a tremendous test of my faith: Would I still be able to open my mouth to praise and preach? I sat quietly before God, weeping, and said, 'If You are using me, please heal me.' As I waited, and when I stopped worrying, God's marvelous grace came upon me, and my voice gradually recovered."

(Sister Zheng)

✠ May God help Sister Zheng to remain humble and reverent on her journey of service; may the Lord also heal her voice, grant her stability and strength, and enable her to once again sing praises and preach.

Post-Disaster Relief

Due to extreme rainfall, many areas in China have suffered from flooding and mudslides. On August 14, in a predominantly Lisu ethnic group area near Laojun Mountain in Yunnan, the region was struck by severe convective weather, resulting in successive waves of flooding, hail, and flash floods. The entire village's farmland was submerged, and all crops were destroyed. Fortunately, rescuers arrived quickly and began relief efforts. Thankfully, there were no casualties. According to local pastors, many Christian families have been severely affected. We understand that teams of Christian volunteers have already reached out to the local residents and are organizing the delivery of relief supplies to the affected families.

✠ Pray for the Lisu families in the remote mountainous areas, whose homes have been destroyed; and pray that the Lord will help them rebuild their homes before winter sets in, so they can withstand the cold winds. Pray for believers who plan to donate warm clothing, hoping it will reach the victims directly.

Rebuilding Through Love

"In the past, my relationship with my eldest son was very strained. He was already an adult, there was almost no communication between us. So I prayed and asked God to help me change. I learned to love him with the love of Christ and to take the initiative to care for him, and our relationship gradually began to change. He actually took the initiative to suggest we go out together—something he used to refuse to do. My son says he now feels the love of our family; this is truly a marvelous grace. Before, we were both too self-centered. But when I submitted to the Lord's authority, willingly doing what was needed without expecting anything in return, that's when the change happened"

(Sister Qi)

✠ May God guide Sister Qi to care for and reach out to her son with Christ's love. May the Lord deepen the trust and affection between mother and son, so that the family may continue to be blessed in harmony.

Gospel Broadcasting

1 Gospel Mission: Earlier, Radio Liangyou held a "Gospel Programming Symposium" for our staff members. Led by three program directors from different regions, the event helped staff reflect on the true meaning of the Gospel and explore how to produce effective Gospel-centered programs. The event covered both theory and practice, and we pray that the Lord will help our staff persevere in their efforts to produce Gospel-centered content.

2 Youth Ministry: The LTS course "Youth Ministry" has been revised and is now officially airing. Students have reported that the program helps them clearly understand how to practically carry out youth ministry and provides a clear direction to follow. May the Lord guide our pastoral staff to lead the course content into a blessing for the younger generation.

because He cares for you. (1 Peter 5:7, NIV)*

PRAYER NEWSLETTER

Oct/Nov 2026

Dear Warriors in Christ,

Over the past few months, many regions in mainland China have been ravaged by severe natural disasters. Among them, the typhoons and flooding in July, as well as the devastating glacial mudslides along the China-Nepal border, were particularly shocking. Scientists have pointed out that these disasters were triggered by the combined effects of global warming and the El Niño phenomenon.

Faced with these natural disasters, as a Christian, I not only feel the insignificance of all creation, but I am also reminded of several Scripture passages: "The Lord sits enthroned over the flood; the Lord is enthroned as King forever. The Lord gives strength to his people; the Lord blesses his people with peace." (Psalm 29:10–11) Even when disaster strikes, we continue to acknowledge that the Lord is King—the One who grants peace and strength to His people.

However, the pain experienced by victims in body, mind, and spirit, as well as their physical needs, remains very real. While financial and material aid are certainly indispensable, companionship and spiritual comfort are even more crucial.

Even if disaster has not yet befallen us personally, as stewards of the earth, we indeed bear an inescapable responsibility. Human's greed-driven, reckless destruction of nature has led to ecological imbalance—a betrayal of God's trust. May we reflect together on our lives today and learn to be faithful stewards.

Change begins with prayer. Life may not be easy, but the Lord promises that in times of tribulation, we can endure through Him, and through all kinds of endurance, we can develop a spiritual character that withstands trials.

Led by the Lord's Love

"Thirty years ago, I happened to tune into Radio Liangyou by chance. I remember listening to an audio drama depicting Jesus' crucifixion. As I listened, time and space felt frozen. The scene of Christ's sacrifice came alive right before me, lingering in my mind for a long time. Touched by Jesus' love, I laid down my doubts and put my firm trust in Him. Though I haven't listened to the programs for over 20 years, I was deeply moved when I recently came across the livestream of Liangyou's 77th Anniversary Thanksgiving Service in a chat group. Those early memories flooded back, and tears flowed uncontrollably—it felt like returning to my childhood home!"

(Sister Lu)

- ✠ May God gently touch Sister Lu's heart once again through Radio Liangyou, reminding her of the love of the Cross and granting her renewed strength. Pray that she remains watchful and close to the Lord.

Monday

Enfolded by Truth

"I used to be trapped in deep depression, constantly weighed down by anxiety. Ever since I committed to studying theology, these long-standing struggles began to resolve. My goal in theological study was never to seek human approval, but to gain a clearer understanding of God's truth. Today, I have learned to live with gratitude. Even in trials, I see how God is shaping me to illuminate the path ahead, experiencing firsthand that truth always welcomes sincere seekers. Studying theology has taught me that this is not merely about accumulating biblical knowledge—it is a life-transforming dialogue with God. Looking back at my study notes, every page bears witness to His grace."

(Sister Jin)

- ✠ May the Lord grant Sister Jin wisdom and sincerity as she grows in truth and practice. Pray that she casts her anxieties on Him, maintains a grateful heart, and continues her journey with renewed direction.

Tuesday

Clothed in Humility

"When fellow coworkers turned on one another and our peaceful fellowship devolved into open conflict. Why did brothers and sisters who once felt like family turn into adversaries? How could this be resolved? Aside from praying, I turned to the Scriptures for answers. As I read about Moses facing criticism from his family and opposition from his own people, his reliance on God and humble posture deeply inspired me. I realized that a spiritual leader's attitude toward conflict matters far more than the practical methods used to resolve it. I came to see that God allows trials to purify our lives and lead us into spiritual abundance. I am now willing to embrace humility to resolve conflict."

(Sister A)

- ✠ May God strengthen Sister A in times of weakness and confusion, granting her spiritual wisdom and humility. Pray also for restored harmony and unity within her church community.

Wednesday

Learning for the Lord

"Our church ministers were misinterpreting Scripture and failing to nourish the congregation with sound doctrine. Many believers lacked a firm spiritual foundation and were unclear about God's heart. The Holy Spirit moved me to study the Bible diligently, but with visual acuity of only 0.4, studying was exceptionally challenging. Later, I discovered Liangyou Theological Seminary and enrolled immediately. My poor eyesight required me to work several times harder, but God's faithful guidance made every hardship worthwhile. After years of study, I have completed all my courses and graduated! Thank God for granting me perseverance, and thank you to the teachers at Liangyou for your tireless dedication."

(Brother Wang)

- ✠ May God grant Brother Wang clear spiritual understanding as he studies the Bible. May church ministers grow deeper in their understanding of biblical truth, so that they can preach the true Gospel.

Staged Accidents & Drunk Driving

Earlier this year, while investigating a traffic accident, the Tongxiang Traffic Police Detachment discovered that a single vehicle had been involved in four collisions in just one week. Suspecting a fraudulent extortion scheme, authorities investigated and uncovered a gang using two main tactics: "waiting for prey" by sending accomplices to monitor nightlife venues for drinking patrons who planned to drive, and "entrapment" by sending female accomplices to encourage victims to drink before orchestrating a collision as they drove away. Fearful of drunk driving penalties, most victims refrained from contacting the police. Ultimately, seven suspects were arrested.

("China News Service", September 14, 2026)

- ✠ May the authorities remain vigilant and investigate patterns of repeated traffic accidents so that deliberately staged incidents can be identified promptly. May greater public awareness also discourage drunk driving, helping to protect the wider community from harm.

Disregard for Privacy

A court in Hangzhou recently concluded a criminal case involving the illegal harvesting of user data from food delivery platforms. Using a malicious web scraper tool named "Shan De Kuai" (Delete Fast), a criminal group illegally gathered consumer orders and review data, subsequently harassing users to force them into removing negative reviews. Under the platform's original privacy design, review databases and customer order details were strictly segregated to keep contact details hidden from merchants. The group targeted merchants under the guise of "reputation management" to collect service fees. The court sentenced four defendants to prison terms ranging from two to three years, alongside fines and the confiscation of illegal gains.

("Workers' Daily", September 10, 2026)

- ✠ May the authorities continue to combat the illegal misuse of users' personal data. May food-delivery platforms also strengthen cybersecurity measures and database encryption to better protect users' privacy and safety.

Relationship Mentors

Across the internet, numerous services promise to help people restore broken relationships or recover lost love. Yet journalists have found that some of these so-called "relationship coaches" do little genuine listening. In some cases, even the replies given to vulnerable clients are generated by AI. Using scripted expressions such as "I understand your pain," they seek to build trust and then persuade clients to move to private WeChat conversations, where they are encouraged to purchase expensive services. Some platforms deliberately target people in emotional distress, exploiting their vulnerabilities and intensifying their anxiety in order to sell costly packages. As a result, some clients are left not only with unresolved relationships but also financial losses and additional emotional wounds.

("China Youth Daily", September 15, 2026)

- ✠ May the Lord comfort those who are lonely and struggling. May authorities provide clear standards and oversight for emotional counselling services, protecting vulnerable people from exploitation.

Death of Mukbang Streamer

Last month, a 24-year-old mukbang streamer with a million followers tragically passed away from severe hypokalemia (low blood potassium). Just three days prior to her passing, she posted a video explaining that she had been hospitalized due to hypokalemia, mentioning that she sometimes consumed dozens of preserved eggs in a single livestream session. Driven by sensation-seeking audiences and platform algorithms, a relentless cycle continues to consume the health and lives of young people in exchange for likes, tips, and sales revenue. Although binge-eating broadcasts are legally prohibited, creating a healthy online ecosystem requires meaningful platform governance and a shift in public viewing habits.

("China News Service", September 9, 2026)

- ✠ May authorities strengthen regulation of live-streaming platforms and prevent the promotion of content that is harmful to physical and mental well-being. May the Lord change society's fascination with sensationalism and help cultivate values that honor health, dignity, and life.
